

Ellen Says No concert to benefit leukemia research

Journal Staff

Local band Ellen Says No will play a benefit show for leukemia research at 9 p.m. Saturday at the Interchange, 8429 S. 228th St., Kent.

The band will perform with Slop Shot and Superfekta as a benefit for the Leukemia & Lymphoma Society. Cover is $10.

All proceeds from the door will go to the foundation.

Ellen Says No has experienced recent success with its latest recording, which has received regular play on Seattle's 107.7 FM "The End" and also has been receiving airplay on other stations across the nation.

The band recently returned from a six-week tour in support of their latest recordings. Their brand of acoustic rock draws from influences such as Dave Matthews, Matchbox 20 and Weezer.

THE LOWDOWN

ELLEN SAYS NO BENEFIT CONCERT

9 p.m. Saturday. Tickets: $10.
Visit www.ellensaysno.com.

Where:

The Interchange,
8429 S. 228th St., Kent

Slop Shot and Superfekta also will perform. Both bands have a heavy, energetic sound. Slop Shot currently is playing shows in support of their new album, "Read 'Em and Weep."